ZELDA!

THE MUSICAL

A History of Scotch N Soda

The original drama club at CMU, then Carnegie Tech, was called The White Friars. Their first production, All in a Dormitory, a musical about college life, premiered in 1908. The Tartan, the Carnegie student newspaper, hailed it a decided success. The White Friars continued until the outbreak of World War I forced them to take a hiatus.

It was not until 1938 that another drama club was formed. The organizers of the Carnegie Tech annual Spring Carnival decided to put on a show along the lines of the famous productions of the Princeton Triangle Club, Wig and Mask of Penn, and Harvard's acclaimed Hasty Pudding. A contest was held to find a name for Techs new drama club. The winning entry, Scotch N Soda, was initially vetoed by the administration. However, the runner-up, Hop N Scotch, was so unpopular with the students that Scotch N Soda was reconsidered and finally adopted.

No Strings, written and directed by Buzz Feinblatt, a college revuesical satirizing campus life in song, dance, and comic skits, premiered at Carnegie Music Hall in May, 1938.

Since then, Scotch N Soda has continued to produce original musicals and plays each year. Productions became more and more professional and highly acclaimed. Notable among Scotch N Sodas successes is the Stephen Schwartz musical Pippin, which went on to become a Broadway hit.

Zelda was written by Colette Silvestri, a former CMU Voice major. Although the idea grew out of the Nancy Millford biography of Zelda Fitzgerald, the show is not based on the Millford book. Silvestri spent nearly four years researching the lives of the Fitzgeralds, Hemingway, and Cole Porter in order to write her own version of Zelda. She is hoping that the show will revitalize Scotch N Soda, which lost some enthusiasm after the department of Drama stopped sponsoring the club. Silvestri is very excited and confident about Zelda.

Scotch N Soda is funded by Student Senate.
