Notes From the Director

Making d'Artegan has been something like the story of d'Artegan — a determined attempt to make a grand gesture in a relatively short period of time. As a first-time musical director I know that without the willingness of the cast and crew of this show to put in a commitment above and beyond the call of duty, d'Artegan would have been far less than what you see.

A close look at the credits of this production will reveal members of the company involved in such aspects as choreography, stage combat and prop design. Had I been called upon to handle these alone, the end result would have reflected the negligible depth of my skills in these areas. To all of thosewho found their stake in this production, and put their time, talent and encouragement toward the fulfillment of my vision of the authors' grand gesture, I offer my warmest thanks.
